Box 2 Definitions of Applied Linguistics

1. '... the learning and teaching of foreign languages constitutes, in our opinion, the most important area within the extensive field of applied linguistics' (van Els et al, 1984)
2. The members of the American Association of Applied Linguistics (AAAL) 'use a wide variety of theoretical frameworks and methodological approaches to address a broad range of language-related issues that affect individuals and society' (AAAL, 2010)
3. Applied Linguistics 'is the point at which all the branches of linguistics intersect with other disciplines' (Robert Kaplan, 1980)
4. '... traditionally, the primary concern of Applied Linguistics has been second language acquisition theory, second language pedagogy and the interface between the two' (Norbert Schmitt, 2002)
5. 'Applied Linguistics itself may be seen as an autonomous, problem-solving discipline, concerned broadly with language (mainly, but not exclusively second language) education and language problems in society' (Steve McDonough, 2002)
6. 'The branch of linguistics concerned with practical applications of language studies, with particular emphasis on the communicative function of language, and including such professional practices as lexicography, terminology, general or technical translation, language teaching (general or specialized language, mother tongue or second language), writing, interpretation, and computer processing of language' (BTB Translation Bureau Canada, 2010)
7. 'The Encyclopedic Dictionary of Applied Linguistics is, as its subtitle states, A Handbook for Language Teaching' (Keith Johnson & Helen Johnson, 1998)
8. 'Applied Linguistics is an interdisciplinary field of research and practice dealing with practical problems of language and communication that can be identified, analysed or solved by applying available theories, methods and results of Linguistics or by developing new theoretical and methodological frameworks in Linguistics to work on these problems. Applied Linguistics differs from Linguistics in general mainly with respect to its explicit orientation towards practical, everyday problems related to language and communication' (AILA – International Association of Applied Linguistics 2010)
9. Applied Linguistics is 'an amalgam of research interests' (David Block, 2009)
10. 'Applied Linguistics (AL) provides the theoretical and descriptive foundations for the investigation and solution of language-related problems, especially those of language education (first-language, second-language and foreign-language teaching and learning), but also problems of translation and interpretation, lexicography, forensic linguistics and (perhaps) clinical linguistics' (Dick Hudson's online survey of BAAL (British Association of Applied Linguistics) members)
